

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A stab-in connector that locks with an opposing identical connector, through a slot in the main beam of a suspended ceiling grid. The connector has a cantilevered locking latch that is pivoted in an arc from the base of the connector that delays contact with the side of the slot as the connector is being stabbed into the slot.